ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Russell Daye

Russell Daye is a minister of the United Church of Canada. In 2002 he received a Ph.D. in comparative religious ethics from Concordia University in Montreal for his research on South Africa's reconciliation process. From 2002 to 2004 he taught ethics and theology at the Pacific Theological College and worked with NGOs and Fiji's federal government on that country's reconciliation process. He has also lectured at Concordia University and McGill University, Montreal. He is the author of Political Forgiveness: Lessons from South Africa (Orbis Books, 2004) and a number of published papers on post-conflict reconciliation, economic globalisation, and the role of multinational corporations in the developing world.

Manfred Ernst

Since 1998 Dr. Manfred Ernst has been the Project Manager and Research Coordinator of the Pacific Theological College in Veitutu, Suva. He has a Masters Degree in Political Science and Modern History from the University in Hamburg/Germany obtained in 1982 and a PhD in Philosophy from the same University, obtained in 1995.

Dr. Ernst has vast experience in research and writing in Central America, the Caribbean and Pacific Islands and has published numerous books, book articles and articles on a variety of subjects. In Fiji and the Pacific Islands he is known as author of the book Winds of Change – Rapidly Growing Religious Groups In the Pacific Islands.

Dr. Ernst is a member of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Baden Wurttemberg, Germany and married with 2 children.

Yannick Fer

Born in 1969, Yannick Fer is a sociologist at the CEIFR (Centre for Interdisciplinary Studies of Religion), CNRS-EHESS, Paris. He lived in French Polynesia from 1998 to 2002 and has been doing field research since 1993 in the Austral Islands and Society Islands. He published in 2000, with Gwendoline Malogne-Fer, Tuaroté, réflexions bibliques à Rapa, Conversion et identité (Papeete, Haere Po) and in 2005, Pentecôsimme en Polynésie française, l'Evangile relationnel (Geneva, Labor et Fides). He is currently studying the contemporary redefinition of relations between culture and Christianity elaborated by several Charismatic Protestant organizations active in the Pacific Islands.

Klaus Hock

Klaus Hock has been Professor of “History of Religion - Religion and Society” in the Faculty of Theology at the University of Rostock, Germany, since 1996. He earned his MTh degree from the University of Munich, and between his Doctorate (1985) and Habilitation (1993) at the University of Hamburg, he worked as a Senior Research Fellow at the Universities of Hamburg, Erlangen-Nuremberg and Munich, and as a lecturer at the Theological College of Northern Nigeria. From 1994 to 1996 he held the desk for Development Education/Co-ordination at the Policy Planning Unit of the Association of the Churches’ Development Services in Germany. Since 1995 he has also been the Moderator of the Project for Christian-Muslim Relations in Africa (PROCMURA). His focus of research is on Christian-Muslim relations, African Christianity and African Religions, Intercultural Theology, and Transculturation. Major publications, among others: Der Islam-Komplex, 1993 (The Islam Complex), Einführung in die Religionswissenschaft, 2002 (Introduction to the Study of Religions), The Interface Between Research and Dialogue: Christian-Muslim Relations in Africa (2004), and Kirchengeschichte Afrikas und des Nahen Ostens, 2005 (Church History of Africa and the Near East).

Philip Gibbs

Born in 1947, Philip Gibbs is a member of the Divine Word Missionaries – a Catholic religious missionary congregation. He is from New Zealand, but has studied in Australia, USA, and Italy and holds a postgraduate degree in Anthropology and a Doctorate in Theology. He first came to Papua New Guinea in 1973 and has spent the major part of his time in that country until now.

Gwendoline Malogne-Fer

Born in 1970, Gwendoline Malogne-Fer is a sociologist at the CEIFR (Centre for Interdisciplinary Studies of Religion), CNRS-EHESS, Paris. She lived in French Polynesia from 1998 to 2002 and has been doing field research since 1993 in the Austral Islands and Society Islands. She published in 2000, with Yannick Fer, Tuaorit, réflexions bibliques à Rap. Conversion et identité (Papeete, Haere Po) and in 2005 completed a Ph.D. dissertation at the EHESS, on the evolution of women’s role within the Evangelical Church of French Polynesia (When Women get the Right to Speak: Institutional Democratization and Ministries’ Professionalization within the EEFP). She is now doing comparative research on women pastorate of women in different Pacific Protestant historic churches.

Lynda Newland

Lynda Newland is an anthropologist who is currently lecturing at the University of the South Pacific in Suva, Fiji. In 2001, she received her PhD from Macquarie University in Sydney, Australia, for her ethnography on Muslim women and family planning in West Java, Indonesia. Shortly afterwards, she was offered a lecturing position at U.S.P., during which time she became interested in Christianity and politics in Fiji. She then returned to Australia for a stint at the University of Newcastle but continued her research into Christianity in the Pacific. Recently, she took up another contract with U.S.P. She has published several papers on aspects of Islam and development in Indonesia, and on Christianity in Fiji.

Rum’aroti Tenten

Born in 1957, Rev. Rum’aroti Tenten is a Minister of the Kiribati Protestant Church teaching at Tangintebu Theological College, in South Tarawa, in the Republic of Kiribati.
He lived in Tarawa, and from 1989 to 1991 served a congregation in Beru, Kiribati. From 1995 to 1997 he went to do his Bachelor of Divinity at the Pacific Theological College (PTC), after which he returned to teach Theology at Tangintebu. After three years of teaching, he went to do his MTh in Ethics and Theology at PTC (1998–1999). After graduating, he returned to Tangintebu to teach the same subjects from 2000 until now.

Patrick Vakaoti

Patrick Vakaoti is a sociologist and a graduate of the University of the South Pacific, Suva, Fiji. He has had teaching stints at two high schools in Fiji and at U.S.P where he taught Youth Development Work prior to leaving for Brisbane, Australia, where he is currently pursuing a PhD. He is interested in youth issues, specifically in their relationship to socio-political and economic change.

Franco Zocca

Dr. Franco Zocca is a member of the Society of the Divine Word, a missionary order of the Catholic Church. Born in Verona, Italy; in 1943 he did his theological studies at the Gregorian University, Rome (1964-1969) and his sociological studies at the University of Trento (1969-1978). He undertook sociological research and teaching in the island of Flores, Indonesia (1974-1987). Since 1993 he has been working at the Melanesian Institute, Goroka, Papua New Guinea, in which he is head of the research department. He publishes regularly in the Melanesian Institute’s journal Catalyst.